

BIOGRAPHY

UNITED STATES AIR FORCE

CHIEF MASTER SERGEANT CLINTON W. CAMAC

Chief Master Sergeant Clinton W. Camac is the 13th Air Force and 36th Air Base Wing command chief master sergeant, Andersen Air Force Base, Guam. He serves as liaison between commanders and enlisted members, while advising commanders on concerns, morale and attitudes of the enlisted force. He serves as functional manager for the base first sergeants. Chief Camac promotes programs to increase morale, enhance recognition and improve quality of life. He guides and counsels airmen and noncommissioned officers on a variety of matters and evaluates the quality of noncommissioned officer leadership, management and supervisory training. He also serves on committees to develop and implement command policies and programs.

Chief Camac entered the Air Force in September 1980. After graduating from basic military training, he began his career in administration. In 1992, he was selected for retraining as a professional military education commandant. In 1995, he was selected for retraining as a first sergeant.

He assumed his current duties as command chief master sergeant in December 2000.
